

2018 Annual Report

Toledo/Lucas County CareNet Provides
Low-Income Lucas County Residents
With Access to Coordinated Healthcare Services

"I didn't know these services existed. The help really goes deep. It's wonderful."

Facing - and Adapting to - Change

Support for CareNet Remains Critical

A client living in a boarding house room barely bigger than a closet. Two brothers sharing home-delivered meals for one because they couldn't afford to buy food. Women at risk of losing their newborns before their first birthdays because they don't have safe housing and other necessities.

These are some of the cases Toledo/Lucas County CareNet's community health workers have encountered since the nonprofit began providing care coordination to low-income Lucas County residents in 2015. Since its inception as a charity care network in 2002, CareNet has continued to adjust to the needs of residents as it strives to provide access to coordinated healthcare services.

Ohio's expansion of Medicaid eligibility to more people helped fuel CareNet's change. Lucas County residents needed help obtaining Medicaid and utilizing their newfound healthcare coverage, along with getting basic necessities that everyone needs to be healthy. CareNet began hiring community health workers in 2015 to ensure the network's care coordination clients have a medical home and get connected to needed medical and social services.

Toledoan Judith Williams, who is pictured on the cover, retired in January 2018. After most of Judith's savings and monthly Social Security benefits went toward rent and utilities, her gas was turned off a few months later. She had to microwave water to bathe and didn't have enough money for food. But Glori Puskarich, Judith's CareNet community health worker, helped her apply for Medicaid to supplement her Medicare and food stamps. Glori also helped her get home-delivered meals and pay for utilities.

With the continued support of our donors, volunteers and other partners, CareNet will continue to be Lucas County's charity care network helping Lucas County residents get the care they need. CareNet also needs that support to continue providing care coordination to low-income residents like Judith and hundreds of others.
